Pastor Tommy Branagh

The sermon today had three main points:

In a relationship with God we are:

1. Known and loved
2. Given a Purpose
3. Shown justice and mercy

Did any of those points resonate with you more than the others? What were some of your takeaways?

- Relationships where we are known and loved are increasingly rare. What are some of the ingredients needed to create these kinds of relationships with other people? How might that apply to your relationship with God?
- Where are the places you find purpose in life right now?
- God is a God of justice and mercy. Many tend to lean into one understanding of God more than the other when it comes to justice and mercy. Which side do you lean on, and why do you think that might be?
- How does this conversation challenge you to grow, learn, or do something new moving forward?
